CHAPTER I

Once upon a time...

*...in the heart of Edinburgh, in 1687, a grand house built for the city's Lord Provost opened its doors to magic, merriment, and the most lavish of celebrations. That place was Prestonfield House
- and this festive season, it's your turn to follow
in their footsteps.*

II

A Gathering of Joy - The Enchanted Historic Private Rooms of Prestonfield

In a land where magic lingers in every gilded frame and flickering candle, there stood a house unlike any other - Prestonfield. Each winter, as the snow began to fall and the scent of mulled wine filled the air, its doors opened wide to welcome joyful gatherings from near and far.

The Garden Room

Within its hallowed halls lie hidden chambers of celebration - each one a scene from a festive fairy tale, waiting for your story to unfold.

The Stuart Room

*This Christmas,
let Prestonfield be the setting for your storybook celebration.*

Your fairytale begins here...

Our Historic Private Dining Rooms at Prestonfield

The Garden Room

Beyond a secret doorway, there bloomed a room of rare beauty. Delicate hand-painted scenes told tales of Eastern wonder, and through tall windows the stars would sometimes twinkle just for you.

With space for up to 50 merry-makers and a private terrace kissed by winter air, it was a realm of celebration.

The Stuart Room

In the heart of the house, a room of deepest crimson and glistening gold awaited noble guests. With velvet drapes, candlelit splendour, and space for up to 14 guests, it was said that laughter echoed loudest here.

A chamber for bold celebrations and unforgettable feasts.

The Italian Room

Past corridors lined with portraits of old, guests would find Prestonfield's oldest and most storied dining room. Murals of faraway Italian vistas danced on the walls, while an open fire cast flickering shadows like something from a dream. At one majestic table sat 16, though smaller round tables could host up to 24 enchanted souls.
